Well, that's a very interesting question. Cause that's the whole key to my system.

I don't.

My little twist on John's method is that I hate article marketing and writing for backlinks. But John's system is somewhat heavily reliant on article marketing.

So I found another way.

So far, for me its worked out incredibly well. My whole process revolves around 3 fundamental processes....

1. Extremely thorough niche research. This is the fun part, way better than spending my time article marketing (not that there's anything wrong with that...)
2. Insanely optimized WordPress based templating system (no plug-ins, all natively SEO'd stuff) with a one click template install. Site is 95% built when the template is activated. One page site (plus about, contact, privacy)
...
3. Exact match domain (.com, .net or .org) no .biz, .info junk...

I've been following the Xfactor method for a little over two months now and have earned $1792.71 in that time.

I've never received an Adsense check in two years of trying before last month's $309.82 check from Google...

Just wanted to give a shout out to John on this forum, since this is where I discovered his incredible system.

At around 10pm tonight I checked my Adsense account for the first time today and I finally cracked the $100 mark, $129.64 as of a few minutes ago (see attachment)

My previous high mark was $79.35 yesterday and I've cracked $70 five times since starting this system.

Thanks again John!

You are the hardest working student of my e-book that I know of, so you deserve every penny!

Re: My first $100 dollar day on Xfactor method

That's awesome! Keep it up. Now shoot for $200/day.

So are your 25 sites just focused on 1 keyword (1 page which is the home page that has the content based on your domain keyword) plus the privacy, contact, etc. pages? Or did you do like the homepage on your main keyword plus like 4-5 more pages with related keywords?

Posts

So all your sites are ranking on the first page (for your main keyword) of the SERPs without doing any backlinking? Is most of your traffic coming from your main keyword or from other long tail keywords?

What kind of average impressions are you getting on a daily basis to your sites? When do your keyword research what kind of search volume are you going after for your main keyword?

What kind of average CPC do you go after when doing your keyword research?

Re: My first $100 dollar day on Xfactor method

Congratulations Clickbump, that's good inspiration to those like me following Xfactor's Micro Adsense course. Quite surprised that you don't do backlinking to get such excellent results. I'll be interested to find out if it continues this way in the long term.

A good template will help you make the most of your visitors. A template won't make any difference if you don't have the traffic in the first place.

The secret to success is hard word, patience, persistence, and quite a bit of common sense.

Tightly focused site based on ONE KEYWORD PHRASE that Google is forced to rank highly for the search. Only one product page built around this keyword phrase. No distractions, only one adsense block following Xfactor guidelines (though I don't use sidebar ad link units).

Not all of them, but out of 26 adsense niche microsites, I have 15 in the top 15. Of those, 10 are in the top 10 (on page one of G) - see the attachment for the breakdown... This snapshot was taken just now as I'm writing this...

I always use GAKT on EXACT MATCH and look for a local search volume of 2500 or greater. I want cpc to be greater than $1 if possible, but I will let it float up/down with the search volume.

 Re: My first $100 dollar day on Xfactor method

Looking really good clickbump! Well done :-)

Is there a lot to read in xfactors forum now? I wanted to try the guide more before buying into it. -- and i've paied for access to forums before that have been dead. So wanted to hear what others thought first.

Quick question...

You say you build a site "based on ONE KEYWORD PHRASE", Which of the following examples is closest to what you mean...

EXAMPLE 1:

Main Keyword: "wirless keyboard"

Site: www. wirelesskeyboard . com

Page1: "wirless keyboard features"

Page2: "wirless keyboard history"

Page3: "Brands of wirless keyboards" or do you research close "wirless keyboard" related keywords using MNF, like...

EXAMPLE 2:

Main Keyword: "wirless keyboard"

Site: www. wirelesskeyboard . com

Page1: "wirless keyboard features"

Page2: "cheappink keyboard"

Page3: "Brands of wirless mouse and keyboard sets"

Thanks so much for the help

So based on that and your rankings are you getting most of your traffic from your main keyword? Or do you write one long post on your home page in which your incorporate many other related long tails which gets you alot of your traffic?

Can you give us an estimate of what kind of CTR you are getting? I would assume it has to be in the upper 20's to 40 if you are going for average of $1 CPC unless you getting like a ton of visitors daily (i.e. 150-300 daily uniques)?

quality of the focused contributions - everyone on the same page with respect to the process, so that is good. And quite a bit of "sharing what I'm learning" type content...

Site: www. wirelesskeyboard . com

I always go for EMD (exact match domain name) and its one of the most critical steps to my process (along with the other fundamentals I mentioned a few posts back)...

So then your site would be one focused page (the homepage) on "wireless keyboard" + plus tightly focused related keywords? Is the homepage one long post (i.e. 1000 words) to capture all the related keywords as well? Besides that page you then just have the contact, privacy, and about correct?

Have you tried to get some backlinks to move many of these to like #1 spot?

With no backlinking your keyword research must be real good in that you are finding keywords that have such good search volume with hardly any competition. I think I need to focus more in this area as well, although the last few sites I've started ranked on the first page once it was indexed (though the traffic is not there).

Exactly (between 300-1000 words on average per site for the home page money content)

I have that in my plan as an option when needed, the interesting thing is that some of my key money sites are naturally progressing upward without the need, so while that's happening, I'm just focused on repeating my process over and over...

But yes, if I could prove out that x hours of post launch work could move a site x positions up and generate x amount of increased earnings then the numbers would support either spending more time launching sites (at an ~ 40% success rate) or bumping existing sites further up into higher daily earnings...

(I can tell you there is a big jump in earnings from a #4 to a #2 position on ~400 impressions a day :-)

So to the extent I would engage in article marketing, by far the biggest bang for the buck is concentrating on moving a site from say #4-8 up to #2 (vs spending time trying to get a #32 to a #10)

A note on backlinks > I get 5-10 backlinks as an outgrowth of my "forum sig site indexing" process, so "no backlinks" in literal is a bit of a misnomer, but I don't proactively follow an article marketing backlink plan...

We don't use the actual name in the URL but we just find the product first then remove the name brand and wrap the site around those keywords right??

I'm a tard when it comes to the research part of the process but...everything else is crystal clear.. =)

Thanks

1) Get inspired - find a niche site idea you want to research and do a very thorough job seeking out the niche that meets the criteria below

2) Relentlessly research the niche - Check GAKT for keywords on that niche idea. Look for product or service related KWP's that...

Quote:

- Have a min of 2500 EXACT monthly searches

- You can get the EMD (exact match domain in .com, .net or .org)

- There are at least 3 PR- or PR-0 sites in Google top ten for the search phrase - These are your marks or "targets" and you are going to unseat one of these guys :-)

Hint > I use SEO4Firefox to get this directly from the G SERPS

- spyfu has at least 5 advertisers as a minimum and .50 CPC (as a minimum) for the KWP

In terms of your ranking problem, the metrics you've provided, on their face alone, indicate that it should not be too difficult to get ranked and in money if you've done your on-site SEO and have an EMD (exact match domain).

Do you have SEO4Firefox plug-in?

If so, make sure it's turned on (from your browsers status bar, it should not be greyed out) and do a search for your keyword phrase in Google, then hit the "100" link to insure you are not getting personalized SERPS.

Once you've done that, assuming your site is not one of the top 10, you should see at least 3 sites in the top ten with PR- or PR-0 and less than 50-100 Y! Page Links that are valid and not EMD's

If that checks out, then I would expect you should rank very soon as your site ages a bit (Again, assuming all of the fundamental criteria is checked off)...

If not, its going to be tough work and if it were me, I'd move on to the next niche and cut losses...

When judging the top 10 sites do you take into consideration whether it is an internal page that is ranking or top-level domain? I try to find keywords where many internal pages are ranking with few backlinks (regardless of the PR). Do you also look if they have the keyword in their Title or top level domain? What's your take on this?

 Re: My first $100 dollar day on Xfactor method

Great work so far clickbump. I was wondering if you could PM an example of one of your sites. I am starting an adsense campaign and I would like to take a look at what your doing.

I'm just not a full time Adsense guy though and I've only got so much time with which to spend on several projects (and most importantly...Family) So, I pick my spots.

I will likely get around to nudging those top ten sites higher if they shift the other direction, but as of now they are doing fine, actually better than fine, beyond my wildest expectations, and I'm content to let them ride it out for now...
